WHAT IS CONSTRUCTION MANAGEMENT?

Construction Management puts our Clients firmly in control and is a proven construction delivery method. The Client, as usually the case, appoints the professional team (designers, consultants etc). Then early in the process (sometimes pre-planning) the Client appoints the Construction Manager to manage the procurement, construction delivery and handover of the project.

After careful consideration, the works are split into trade packages. Full support of the Construction Manager allows the Client to enter into trade contracts. The Construction Manager manages the procurement and delivery of the works with the employer free to decide on the level of their involvement within the project.

The Client benefits from the reduced cost of construction and programme focus afforded to them. It also provides the Client greater flexibility, reduced risks involved with contractual risk adverse and financially weak contractors.

ADVANTAGES OF CONSTRUCTION MANAGEMENT

There are huge advantages in selecting Construction Management over a traditional procurement. The main advantages are that it is cheaper, quicker, highly flexible and offers the Client control that traditionally procured contracts do not allow. Other key advantages of using CM:

- Accelerated programme allowing an overlap of design and construction
 - Ability to closely manage cost during design and procurement stages
 - Proactive management of the design and construction process minimising impact of change
 - Allows hands-on involvement of the Client
 - Focused on meeting the needs of the Client
 - Integration of design and construction skills
 - Full control over design including incorporation of design by specialist contractors
- Ability of the Client to influence the selection of trade contractors/suppliers
 - One-to-one contractual relationships (no profit on profit)
 - Management focus on programme, sequencing and buildability
 - Client ownership of tendering and contractual arrangements
 - Opportunity to package the work to suit the capability of the trade contractors and to manage on site interfaces
 - Ability to identify and act upon poor trade contractor performance
 - Focussed on offering a professional construction delivery.
